Overview

Globalization of Higher Education is a two-day conference that will gather some of the world's most prominent thinkers on education and globalization with the leaders of both U.S. and international universities. The conference will provide a conversational platform to share and discuss the opportunities that are emerging to shape the future of higher education.

About the Hosts

Former Governors Jeb Bush (FL) and Jim Hunt (NC) are known as education governors. The two support a strong future for higher education and believe that one of the ways it can be achieved is by expanding the reach of top quality brands to all global citizens.

Queens' College is a constituent college of the University of Cambridge, England. Queens' has been a center of learning for more than 550 years and boasts a rich, complex, and varied history – much like the thriving academic community it supports.

Attendees & Speakers

Participation at the Globalization of Higher Education conference is by invitation only. Attendees will include leaders of top U.S. and international universities, as well as political leaders, cultural thought leaders, influencers in post-secondary education, and dignitaries from the United States and around the world.

Among the 15 speakers:

Hillary Rodham Clinton, Former Secretary of State and Former U.S. Senator from New York

Martin Bean, Vice Chancellor of The Open University

Dr. Clayton Christensen, Harvard Business School professor and eminent expert on disruptive innovation; and many more.
